The Ghost Army of World War II

How One Top-Secret Unit Deceived the Enemy with Inflatable Tanks, Sound Effects, and Other Audacious Fakery (UPDATED EDITION)

Rick Beyer and Elizabeth Sayles

In the summer of 1944, a group of young GIs—artists, designers, architects, and sound engineers, including such future luminaries as Bill Blass, Ellsworth Kelly, Arthur Singer, and Art Kane—landed in France to conduct a secret mission. From Normandy to the Rhine, the men of the 23rd Headquarters Special Troops, known as the Ghost Army, conjured up phony convoys, phantom divisions, and make-believe headquarters to fool the enemy about the strength and location of American units. Every move they made was top secret, and their story was hushed up for decades after the war.

Hundreds of photographs, along with maps, memos, and letters, accompany meticulous research and interviews with many of the soldiers, weaving a compelling narrative of how an unlikely team carried out amazing battlefield deceptions that saved thousands of American lives. The stunning art created between missions also offers a glimpse of life behind the lines during World War II.

Searching for Home in (Very) Rural America

Navied Mahdavian

Before Navied Mahdavian moved with his wife and dog in November of 2016 from San Francisco to an off-the-grid cabin in rural Idaho, he had never fished, gardened, hiked, hunted, or lived in a snowy place. But there, he could own land, realize his dream of being an artist, and start a family—the Millennial dream.

Over the next three years, Mahdavian leaned into the wonders of the natural Idaho landscape and found himself adjusting to and enjoying a slower pace of living. But beyond the boundaries of his six acres, he was confronted with the realities of America's political shifts and forced to confront the question: Do I belong here?

Mahdavian's beautifully written and unflinchingly honest graphic memoir charts his growth and struggles as an artist, citizen, and new father. It celebrates his love of place and honors the relationships he makes in rural America even as it articulates difficult moments of racism and brutality he experienced as a Middle Eastern American. With wit, humor, and compassion, Mahdavian offers an insider's portrait of one of the most remote and wild areas of the American West.

"In Mahdavian's hands, comics feel like poetry. Perfect ink drawings bring land, beast, and humans, with all their delicacy and yearning, viscerally to life. This Country... made me want to grant my own surroundings the grace, humor, and dignity of Mahdavian's observant study."

—Amy Kurzweil, cartoonist and author of Flying Couch: A Graphic Memoir

A gorgeously illustrated and written debut graphic memoir about belonging, identity, and making a home in the remote American West, by New Yorker cartoonist Navied Mahdavian.

Navied Mahdavian has been a contributing cartoonist at the New Yorker since 2018. His work has also been published in Reader's Digest, Wired, and Alta Online and the books The Rejection Collection and Send Help! Before becoming a cartoonist, he taught the fifth grade, where he learned most of his jokes. 76 Kurdish Textiles

The Art of Disguise

At certain points in history, it has been illegal to sing, educate, or speak in Kurdish. One of the most authoritarian regimes controlling their territory, artists in Kurdistan have historically been required to conceal their ethnic identity in their work. Instead of using the name Kurdistan, poets and musicians frequently substituted the words Gallian (meaning "land of the flowers") or Gale in their poetry and songs and employed floral metaphors and themes within Kurdish rugs and other art practices.

I learned about the Kurdish songwriter-singer and composer Eyad Yusef from family members, from his songs, and from people who personally knew him. In Yusef's song "Wêlê min," which translates to "My Country," he sings, "Wêlê min heve galên," meaning "My country is a flower garden." Kurdistan is not a country. In fact, the Kurds are one of the largest nations without a state. Yusef calling his country a flower garden not only conveys the importance of nature and landscape in the Kurdish psyche but also draws on the imagery.

This reminds me of the patterns on Kurdish textiles and how they emulate nature. Even though Kurds do not have a country, they are profoundly connected to their homeland and intimately tied to the land in the desolate setting. Well-known protest chants such as "The Kurds have no friends but the mountains" reference not only political conflict but also the geographic struggle of being surrounded by oppressors while tied to a friendship with the mountains that have protected them for centuries.

Empathy

When I graduated from college, I decided to take a full-time position at a staffing agency in Washington, DC. Over the course of two years, I worked for nine different companies for a minimum of a month. And at all these companies, I was either the only one or one of two people of color in the entire office. I remember there was this one company where we had weekly staff meetings where there were like ten offices... and I was still the only Black person in the room. When I think of empathy, I think about cultural sensitivity. I started vocal while I was working at this company. So when I thought about diversity and empathy, all these things were going through my mind at that time.

Black Cultural Influence

I've recently been learning about the comparative influence of Black culture. I've been researching other movements outside Black and Brown culture. Right now, I'm doing a lot inspired by the protest in Tiananmen Square in China, and there was a protest sign in English that actually said, "We Shall Overcome." There was actually an "I AM A MAN" sign that was held up during the Arab Spring. I feel like we've set the tone for what protest looks like. From that perspective, I feel like you should infuse your culture in everything you do.

THE SEALS is a collection of "Word" type, a type created for creatives of color who feel they don't have a cup in their industry and want to tell the stories of the people we serve, not the false history of the industry we work in.

Decodependence

A Romantic Tragicomic

Lila Ash

Through her skillful, charming illustrations and a voice that is sardonic, vulnerable, and completely relatable, Lila Ash shares the all-too-well-known moments that she's experienced navigating the world of family, love, and sex through the lens of codependency.

In her late twenties, Ash found herself reliving the relationship traumas of her past. She'd tried everything to help herself move on from painful memories, from therapy to drugs and more, before entering Codependents Anonymous (CoDA), where she discovered the characteristics of codependency—and checked off every box. Ash began drawing her way through her experiences, allowing herself to recognize the codependent behaviors that ruled her life, including:

- How her desperation to get a boyfriend propelled her to be sexually active at summer camp as a young teenager (codependents often confuse sexual attention for approval or acceptance)

"A must-read for anyone who's ever turned to Cher Horowitz for dating advice."

—Emma Allen, New Yorker cartoon editor

Author and New Yorker cartoonist Lila Ash's vulnerable and funny graphic memoir about her attempts to decode her life's relationships through the lens of her recovering codependency.

- Having a crush on her guitar teacher only to later realize that he had ulterior motives (codependents struggle with setting and maintaining boundaries)
- Accepting the role of personal assistant rather than girlfriend in her recent long-term relationship (codependents have trouble accepting when prospective love interests are unavailable)
- And much more

Through unflinchingly honest (and sometimes sad or harrowing) stories, a wry sense of humor, and illustrations that masterfully set the book's tone, Decodependence: A Romantic Tragicomic will resonate with readers who are looking to better understand their own potential codependent relationship behaviors, followers of Ash's popular Instagram account, or fans of graphic novelists and cartoonists like Liana Finck, Aline Crumb, Emily Flake, Katy Fishell, Malaka Gharib, and Olivia de Recat.

Lila Ash is a Los Angeles-based freelance cartoonist, illustrator, and regular contributor to the New Yorker. She has been featured in Lena Dunham's Lenny Letter, WIRED, MAD, the Washington Post, the American Bystander, and the Weekly Humorist. She created a brilliant set of online comics based on real women's harrowing #MeToo stories and a powerful series of portraits honoring Black Lives Matter. Ash is featured in Send Help! A Collection of Marooned Cartoons by Jon Adams and Ellis Rosen, a compilation of New Yorker cartoonists.

Hell

The People and Places

Seymour Chwast and Steven Heller

Whether it's a real place, a human construct, an idea, or a superstition, hell is a grotesque demimonde in literature, cultures, religions, and folklore throughout the ages. There are many different hells to be found, each one distressing in its own way. But they all share the same essence: they are terrible places guarded by one or more evil spirits, where punishment is split into various levels of damnation.

Those who wish to venture on this dangerous journey beyond the gates of the underworld will find their guides in two extraordinary authors and graphic designers: Seymour Chwast and Steven Heller. And like Dante in the footsteps of Virgil, they will be able to navigate their way through the burning (or icy!) dark realms that lurk in the heart of the human imagination—the Jewish Gehenna, the Sunni Jahannam, the Swahili Jehanum, the Mayan Xibalba, and many others—as well as all the characters who have created hell, visited it, or been involved in more or less unfortunate descents into it.

Equally appealing to fans of the literary hellscape of Dante's Inferno, the bright utopia of The Good Place, and the dark humor of Edward Gorey, Hell offers a feast of chillingly hilarious graphic art and illuminating content that comprehensively plumbs the multiple depths of the underworld.

A visual history of the Folly Cove Designers (1941–1969)—one of America’s longest-running block printing collectives.

Trailblazing Women Printmakers

Virginia Lee Burton Demetrios and the Folly Cove Designers

Elena M. Sarni

The Folly Cove Designers (officially 1941–1969) was a grassroots collective of predominantly women block printers founded by Caldecott Award–winner and beloved children’s book author/illustrator Virginia Lee Burton Demetrios (of Mike Mulligan and His Steam Shovel fame).

This trailblazing Gloucester, MA–based group produced more than three hundred distinct designs, which they block printed on fabric. The designs conveyed personal and regional narratives through the use of shared design principles and the compelling language of pattern. The group was propelled to international fame through commercial contracts with major retailers (F. Schumacher, Lord & Taylor, etc.), articles in leading periodicals such as Life, and participation in seminal fine craft exhibitions. Their work continues to inspire contemporary printmakers around the globe, particularly women printmakers.

As the first comprehensive history of the Folly Cove Designers, Trailblazing Women Printmakers documents and celebrates the group’s tremendous success and the incredible artistry of its members. With more than 250 black-and-white and color photographs, author Elena M. Sarni explores the Folly Cove Designers’ history, work, and group dynamics.

MY NATURE STICKER BOOKS

My Nature Sticker Activity Books present a range of interactive activities and stickers that keep children entertained for hours. A quiz at the end of each book tests their knowledge of the fun facts they have learned.

"The first time you show your little nature lovers these books, do not let them know there are stickers involved. Because these are the rare activity books that can hold their own on the quirky, information-packed writing and exquisite artwork alone."
