THE VIBRANT HONG KONG TABLE

88 Iconic Vegan Recipes from Dim Sum to Late-Night Snacks

BY CHRISTINE WONG

A visual and sumptuous ode to Hong Kong that reimagines 88 classic and iconic dishes as colorful and beautiful plant-based meals.

A common Chinese greeting is 食咗飯未呀? “Have you eaten (rice) yet?” which is how Christine Wong’s paternal grandmother would welcome her home during her childhood in Hong Kong. Food was the language of love, with birthdays and special events always celebrated with family meals, from nine-course banquet-style restaurant feasts to simple home-cooked dinners. After leaving Hong Kong and adopting a vegan lifestyle for health and sustainability reasons, Christine yearned to recreate the flavors and textures of her family’s food at home without animal by-products.

The Vibrant Hong Kong Table celebrates many of Hong Kong’s most iconic dishes with a vegan twist. Organized by a day of eating through the city and paying homage to its culinary heritage, these fresh, bright, vegetable-based recipes include:

- Breakfast and Dim Sum 點心: Sampan Congee, Lotus Leaf Rice, “Egg” Tarts
- Cha Chaan Teng 茶餐廳 and Lunchbox Favorites: Baked Tempeh Chop Rice, Black-Pink Pepper Cabbage Steak, Jackfruit Brisket Noodles
- Family-Style Dinners, from Festival Foods to Dai Pai Dongs 大牌檔: “Fish Fragrant” Eggplant, Sweet & Sour Cauliflower, Snow Skin Mooncakes
- Siu Yeh 宵夜 (Late-Night Snacks) and Sweets: Curry “Fishballs,” Three Treasures, Hong Kong Sweet Buns

Christine Wong is a cook and certified health coach with a focus on environmental sustainability. Her Instagram community at @conscious_cooking has followed her plant-based, plastic-free, cultural journey for more than six years. 88 ICONIC VEGAN RECIPES
FROM DIM SUM TO LATE-NIGHT SNACKS
CHRISTINE WONG

❄️ Snow Skin Mooncakes
月餅 月餅 月餅

Snow skin mooncakes originated in Hong Kong in the 1980s, when people became more health conscious. This created a demand for a healthier version of the traditional mooncakes using less sugar and fat. Traditionally, the filling used to be bean filling, a made with lentils. A small bakery near me to the east and I discovered the original, the Snow Skin or Snow Skin Mooncakes, and were fascinated by the Pan Bakery in the late 1980s.

Make the filling: Put the pineapples in a blender or food processor and pulse briefly to break up the chunks into smaller pieces. Pass through a fine mesh sieve and set the juice aside.

FOR THE FILLING:

- 4 cups (900 g) (1800 g) sweet potatoes
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar

FOR THE DOUGH:

- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar

FOR THE DOUGH:

- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar

FOR THE DOUGH:

- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar
- 1 cup (200 g) (400 g) brown sugar

🍵 Buddha's Delight
素菜 素菜 素菜

My paternal grandmother has always been Buddhist. When my grandfather passed away, she became fully vegetarian, eating an 80 vegetable or 80 vegetable diet, which I found to be nutritious and healthy. But this colorful dish could be composed of a combination of all types of vegetables and ingredients. It has become what everyone now associates with the word “Buddha’s Delight” in the most common vegetarian option in Chinese restaurants and it also traditionally served on the first day of Lunar New Year to bring good luck.

Soak the abalone: In a medium bowl, cover the Chinese mushrooms and abalone mushrooms with water and soak overnight. Drain and slice them, reserving the soaking liquid.

In a large bowl, cover the fish skin and seaweed in water and soak for 24 hours. Drain and the fish skin into 1/2-inch pieces. Set aside.

Make the sauce: In a small bowl, combine the sauce ingredients with 1/2 cup (120 ml) of the mushroom soaking liquid. Set aside.

Assemble: Heat a wok or large skillet over high heat and add 1/2 cup (120 ml) of oil. Add the ginger, garlic, and onion and stir for 1 minute. Add the fish skin, mushrooms, and abalone mushrooms, and stir for 2 minutes before transferring to the bowl. Add the remaining 1/2 cup (120 ml) of oil to the wok and stir for 1 minute. Drain and keep aside for about 1 minute.

Notes: Add the soaked ingredients to the skillet, then add the mushrooms and bean sprouts. Heat in the sauce, bring to a boil for 2-3 minutes. Drain the mushrooms, abalone mushrooms, and abalone mushrooms from all the vegetables. Drain with the reserved soaking liquid.

DAWN

On Beginnings

Most of my stories begin in what is unseen—the faint lines tiny flowers blooming from cracks in the sidewalk, the great between shower also blanketed with late night stars, a misty walk during a morning that I rather be tucked away in Mother Nature's soft bed. For me, beginnings tend to take on the ten-ture of spring. They are a fixed point in time, both beautiful and temperamental, both yet to bloom or in trees, vibrant wrens that know they need to make way for clear skies. They are something to behold.

It was a late May morning when my dream of becoming a published author first came true. Within minutes, there was an expectation to celebrate. But I couldn't, not in the way I had been conditioned to, anyway. I physically couldn't raise my glass or raise my voice with appropriate tones or influences. It had little to do with my excitement or disbelief that a liking dream had come true—it was that I read too deeply.

I cared to the point of paralysis. It started me how haltingly this chapter in my life began, but I pressed on because I knew a deeper form of exhilaration was churning beneath the stillness.

Before this, I celebrated every milestone to show evidence of my gratitude. I printed scores and performance, indulging in beginnings without knowing how to tend to them after the main part. I didn't understand just how much energy it takes to care for something beyond the initial point of entry, how much of an intentional commitment it is to continue to work toward something after the initial fanfare has faded—because once the lights come up and the party ends, dawn creeps back around. We're left with the aftermath, though we can't disregard the mess. We have to kick the overflowing trash bag and muddle our way out the way and muddle back onto the path. We have to focus on what really matters.

As I've learned to cultivate a sustained effort of care, it's occurred to me to look at a beginning for what it could be:
a slow start. The word beginning itself starts with be, and that is so deeply what I want to do. I want to be awake to the potential of everything—the midday light trickling through the blinds in the warmer months and quietly fading as the year inches along, reconnecting with friends online and off, finding my feet on the floor again as a pile of laundry is (finally) folded and put away.

I'm not saying there isn't room for gathering and cheering and fun, but so often, beginnings are packaged as grand proclamations, actions, or revolutions. I've come to understand that a beginning is the most precise moment we can

You know that feeling when your stomach flips over just as you cross the high ridge of a roller coaster? The same sensation you get when a new crush leans in for their first kiss, or when a moment throws a shocking yet timely twist into your world?

That feeling gets when you create. It's the light you shine when you finally put pen to paper or brush to canvas or fingers to keys?

That's the Fool.

The Fool represents the ideal creative state. Typical illustrations of the card show a figure with their hand held high, being the sun, light, packed, and ready to leap into adventure, to be carried wherever the wind takes them.

But the Fool also shows up to remind you that to get that reward, you have to take that risk. To access the creative freedom you crave, you have to be willing to jump blind and see where you land. After all, the card makes a promise: you about what happens once the Fool steps off that cliff—maybe they'll spread wings, maybe they'll fall, maybe there's a parachute in that big bag of theirs... there's just no guarantee.

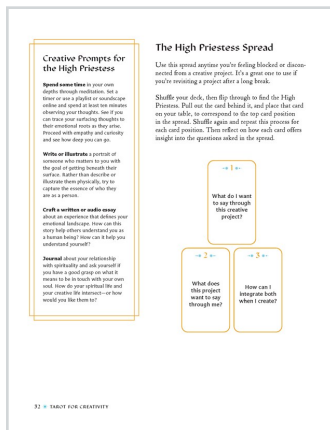

The range of the Fool is that taking a risk opens up a million new options and learning opportunities. The Fool may not know what's coming next, but they're willing to move forward anyway.

Free Your Mind

The Fool shows up as a useful wildcard because of the question themselves: liberty and light are some of the essential, primary colors of creativity. Remix and Build are great essential reads, so are Legally Bound? It's Black! and How to Be a Creative by J. Bindels and Masha Ruzic's Creative Opposites. How to Make Magic makes a perfect foil.

From creative or single works of art to the concept of fuel energy (remember Low Budget and Little Budget?), so it's good to know how you relate to this card—on occasions where it brings things up in your work and life.

When the Fool comes up in a spread, it's often an invitation to first pause for or to introduce an element of subverted freedom into your creative work. Boldly dare to define bright colors or hobby runners into your creations. Give one of your characters a distinctive one attitude and see what that does for your story. Photograph the view from a cliffside, or jump in the world through the lens, or pull your a favorite pen, and see what kind of an that outlook inspires.

Creative Prompts for the High Priestess

Spread across time in your own world. Through meditation, let a flower or a plant or a woodland scene and see how it connects to your thoughts. See if you can draw your own meaning from the most essential parts as they are, present and equally and equally and how they show you can go.

Write or illustrate a portrait of someone who matters to you with the goal of getting beyond their surface. Rather than describe or illustrate their personality, try to capture the essence of who they are as a person.

Write a written or audio story about an experience that defines your essential landscape. How can this story help others understand you as a human being? How can it help you understand yourself?

Journal about your relationship with creativity and self-discovery if you have a good grip on what it means to be in touch with your own world. How do you perceive the world and your creative life? How would you like to live?

What does this project need to get through that?

How can I integrate both when I create?

The High Priestess Spread

Use this spread anytime you're feeling blocked or disoriented about a creative project. It's a great one to use if you're creating a project after a long break.

Shuffle your deck, then flip through to find the High Priestess. Pull out the card behind it, and place that card on your table, as corresponded to the top card position in the spread. Shuffle again and repeat this process for each card position. Then reflect on how each card adds insight into the questions asked in the spread.

TAROT FOR CREATIVITY

A Guide for Igniting Your Creative Practice

BY CHELSEY PIPPIN MIZZI

Tarot isn't just for divination—it's also a great way to connect to your creativity. Discover how tarot can help you stay inspired and make your best work with this practical guidebook.

For modern mystics of any level—from the seasoned cartomancer to the total novice—Tarot for Creativity offers a fresh take on the rich tradition of the tarot. For each of the 78 cards, tarot reader and life coach Chelsey Pippin Mizzi provides an accessible explanation of how the symbols and archetypes relate to creativity, four prompts to encourage creative experimentation and self-discovery, and a tarot spread to help you integrate the card's message into your work. These thoughtful entries are accompanied by vibrant contemporary artwork from the Modern Way Tarot Deck, created by J. Bindels and illustrated by Neil Fernando. Whether you're a writer, artist, engineer, chef, or influencer, this book offers down-to-earth advice for honing your voice, overcoming blocks, and cultivating your creative magic.

Chelsey Pippin Mizzi lives in Avignon, France. Through her creative consultancy, Pip Cards Tarot, she combines tarot and art therapy techniques to help writers, musicians, artists, poets, small business owners, and academics meet their creative goals.

Commit to Your Creativity

While the Lovers is not guarantee for a happily-ever-after, many readers typically do associate the card with romance—and why shouldn't they? It's right there in the name.

Lovers, of course, is one of the most transition cards for creatives. Nothing is more creatively empowering than the promise of new—or renewed—love. On the flip side, a new or renewed and kind heartbreak can be a compelling creative impetus, too. If love inspires you to make your art, you're in good company. Almost all of Shakespeare's plays make love their main theme. The Beatles' love songs made from the top-selling recording artists of all time. Celine Dion's Amoré, giving birth to love, The End, is one of the most responsible paintings in the world. The "Modern Love" column in the New York Times has captured the hearts of readers for twenty years. And romance novel sales continue to grow and grow. It's undeniable: Love is the creative gift that never stops giving.

But there's more to the Lovers than just that. It's for dream visuals, delicious pop songs, and delightful romances. And of course, there's more to love than that, too.

Are You a Good Partner to Your Creativity?

The Lovers card is really about partnership. About the choices and commitments you make in the things you love. It's not a card about falling in love. It's a card about sticking with what you love through better and worse.

When you think about your longest-standing partnerships, you probably think of friends, or romantic partners, or even work relationships.

But your relationship with your creativity is a partnership, too. Learning to treat it as one could be game-changing for your creative life. For one thing, being your creativity as a partner will require you to find new ways of working with it. For another, expressing experiences of creative block, the same way you might address a conflict with a friend or loved one will help you show compassion to yourself and focus on working toward meaningful solutions. And finally, looking at your relationship to your creativity as a partnership will foreground the importance of making commitments to maintain and nurture your creativity.

Whenever you draw the card, think of it as a chance to reflect on how you're honoring your commitments to your creativity, or how you might want to revise and revise the creative commitments you've made.

FLORAL ESTRANGEMENTS

Taunt Your Rivals and Vanquish Your Enemies through the Language of Flowers

BY REBECCA FISHBEIN

Flowers for when you love them . . . not.

The ultimate guide to finding new and fragrant ways to channel your frustrations and fuel your revenge fantasies with some common (and not-so-common) vengeful plants, as well as suggested bouquets to blight your nemeses.

Is there anything more savage than an archly composed bouquet? The Victorians didn't think so, which is why their flower symbols weren't just endearing—they were also cheeky, rude, and downright hostile. This illustrated floriography will help you choose the perfect Floral Estrangement for your situation, such as:

- The “Maybe You Shouldn't Have Given Me Your Phone Password” (Yellow Chrysanthemum, Birdsfoot Trefoil, Basil, Yellow Rose, Tansy)
- The “Still Thinking about the $1K I Spent to Be a Bridesmaid at Your Destination Wedding” (Black-Eyed Susan, Birdsfoot Trefoil, Delphinium, Orange Lily)
- The “His Mommy Issues Are Now Your Problem” (Withered White Rose, Pine, Delphinium)

With incredible, subtly hostile illustrations of flowers throughout, this is a sumptuous, decadent, guilty pleasure of a gift or self-purchase. As a modern bard says, “Don't get sad, get even.”

Rebecca Fishbein is a freelance writer and the author of Good Things Happen to People You Hate. You can find her writing in the New York Times, the Washington Post, Vulture, Jezebel, and The Cut, among others. She lives in Brooklyn with her houseplants.

GOTH PARENTING

The Dark Joys of Raising Baby Bats

BY CASEY GILLY, ILLUSTRATED BY ROBIN ROBINSON

From the cradle bars to pre-teen goo goo mucks, Goth Parenting is an illustrated humor book with heart for families who do things a little differently.

Your local mall goths and graveyard lurkers experience the same milestones of parenthood as anyone else. Goths just do it with a little extra style and more Edgar Allan Poe references.

Goth Parenting takes you from a baby bat's very earliest days through age seven, illustrating parents' memorable moments, challenges, and rewards along the way. Like figuring out how to child-proof your tomb sweet tomb, what to feed a toddler to make sure they live deliciously, and how to cope if your little monster doesn't wish every day was Halloween.

Whether your gashlycrumb tiny is a ball of darkness like you or a little ray of sunshine, there's something here for every alternative parent. Because being a goth parent is about more than just Victorian accessories and black clothing—it's about acceptance, love, and always being yourself. And also black clothing.

Casey Gilly is a comics writer, horror fan, and mother to a small goblin. The first two prepared her for the third. She resides in the Pacific Northwest, where she writes comics including Buffy the Last Vampire Slayer, My Little Pony, Archie Horror, and Dungeons and Dragons: Ravenloft, as well as tarot decks and more. She was, is, and always will be Extremely. Embarrassingly. Goth.

Robin Robinson is the author-illustrator of a book about goblins (No One Returns from the Enchanted Forest) and a book about books (This Book Is My Best Friend) and has always been drawn to stories about making friends with the monsters. Also haunting the Pacific Northwest, Robin tries to live every day like it's Halloween.

CAT PEOPLE TO JUDGE IN ART AND LIFE

BY NICOLE TERSIGNI

From the author of the hit humor book Men to Avoid in Art and Life comes this tongue-in-cheek collection of cats' innermost thoughts.

Cat people love their cats deeply . . . maybe a little too deeply. Cats, on the other hand, secretly hate our haircuts but tolerate our presence because we have the thumbs to open the food can. Against the backdrop of fine art, bestselling author Nicole Tersigni delves into the minds of our feline companions and the people who serve them.

Broken into five sections representing all kinds of cat people, including the Smotherer, the Oversharer, the Pushover, the Proud Parent, and the Roommate, this hilariously insightful cat humor book says the things our loved ones can't—that Mewlius Caesar would enjoy us more if we gave them some space. And a better name.

Nicole Tersigni is a comedic writer experienced in improv comedy and women's advocacy. She lives in Metro Detroit with her husband, daughter, and two dogs.

TASTE IN MUSIC

Eating on Tour with Indie Musicians

BY LUKE PYENSON AND ALEX BLEEKER

In this unique and deeply thoughtful collection, musician Alex Bleeker (Real Estate) and food and travel journalist Luke Pyenson (formerly of Frankie Cosmos) take readers on tour with a diverse lineup of inspiring indie musicians from around the world, sharing meals and travel experiences, peeking behind the curtain at this singular and singularly misunderstood way of life.

Through original essays and engaging conversations with dozens of indie musicians representing several subgenres, scenes, and eras, food takes center stage in stories about being on tour and eating on tour and how this basic human necessity can create a sense of community and interconnectedness in one of the most mobile industries in the world. Based broadly on the subject of eating on tour, these entries each spin off into their own focused and exciting behind-the-scenes story, but all confirm what Pyenson and Bleeker suspected all along—food looms large in the lives of touring musicians, and it can be used as a gateway into understanding what going on tour is really like.

In addition to wide-angle meditations about eating on tour, Pyenson and Bleeker have gathered stories that take place on five continents, in private homes and street-side stalls, in temples of fine dining and in actual temples, backstage and in the van, early morning and late at night. Stories that deal with the best parts of touring: meaningful cultural exchange, hospitality-induced euphoria, and the opportunity to build relationships around the world.

Luke Pyenson is a food and travel journalist whose work has appeared in The Washington Post, The New York Times, The Boston Globe, Saveur, and other publications. He was the longtime drummer of the critically acclaimed indie rock band Frankie Cosmos and founding drummer of cult DIY band Krill. He holds an MA in the Anthropology of Travel, Tourism, and Pilgrimage from SOAS, University of London, and lives in Brooklyn with his wife, Lauren.

Alex Bleeker is the bassist and co-founder of beloved indie rock band Real Estate and ascendant jam band Taper's Choice. During his decade-and-a-half career as a musician, he has released more than ten full-length albums and toured extensively on five continents. He holds a bachelor's degree from Bennington College and lives in coastal California with his partner, Leanne.

New Paintings for an Old Diary

BY CARSON ELLIS

“Feels like reading a love story that doesn't quite know it's a love story yet, and a success story that doesn't know it's made it.”

—Emma Straub, New York Times—bestselling author of This Time Tomorrow

Award-winning, beloved children's book author and illustrator Carson Ellis makes a stunning adult debut with an illustrated memoir that evocatively captures a specific cultural moment of the early 2000s and in her journey as an artist.

In January 2001, the young artist Carson Ellis moved into a warehouse in Portland, Oregon, with a group of fellow artists. For the first week she lived there, she kept a detailed diary full of dry observations, mordant wit, hijinks with friends (including her future husband, Decemberists frontman Colin Meloy), and turn-of-the-millennium cultural touchstones. Now, Ellis has richly illustrated this two-decade-old journal with extraordinary new paintings in the signature style that has made her an award-winning picture book author today.

This beautiful volume offers a snapshot of a bygone era, a meticulous re-creation of quotidian frustrations and small, meaningful moments, and a meditation on what it means both to start your journey as an artist and to look back at that beginning many years later.

Carson Ellis is the author and illustrator of bestselling picture books Home and Du Iz Tak? (a Caldecott Honor book) and the illustrator of a number of books for children, including The Mysterious Benedict Society series by Trenton Lee Stewart, The Composer Is Dead by Lemony Snicket, and the Wildwood Chronicles by her husband, Colin Meloy. She does work for The New Yorker, the New York Times, and other publications. Ellis lives on a farm in Oregon.

New Paintings for an Old Diary

By Carson Ellis

would be later because I was in a quieter mood at the moment. I went back to sorting pictures: took my favorite pictures from each year and put them in a big pile, in perfect chronological order, starting on March 1993 and ending on December 2000. Then I found spaces for all my things, swept and mopped the floor, attempted to assemble my drawing table but discovered, to my dismay, it was missing a crucial piece: I stole a shower rack from the bathroom on which I put all my clothes. I put light bulbs in all my lights and got Colin's down comforter from his room to put on my futon. Margery called to see if I'd go out, but I didn't feel like it. Colin came over with pizza and then left to make flyers at Kinko's. I finished Sivi's novel. I read pages 185–246 and didn't finish until one a.m. I went downstairs and Colin and Sivi were watching the very end of Naked. I watched with them and then borrowed Under Milk Wood by Dylan Thomas from Colin. I read the first 25 pages aloud and went to sleep.

THE THEATRICAL ADVENTURES OF EDWARD GOREY

Rare Drawings, Scripts, and Stories

BY CAROL VERBURG

The definitive, deluxe art book about Edward Gorey's theater work—from the iconic and Tony Award-winning Broadway production of Dracula to the wildly creative productions to which he devoted the last decade of his life.

Edward Gorey (1925-2000) was a prodigious and original artist who published more than one hundred beloved works, including The Gashlycrumb Tinies, The Doubtful Guest, and Amphigorey, and illustrations that appeared regularly in such publications as The New Yorker and The New York Times and books by authors ranging from Charles Dickens and T.S. Eliot to John Updike and Virginia Woolf, among many others. His animated credits for the PBS Mystery! series introduced him to millions of television viewers. In addition to his intricate pen-and-ink drawings and darkly humorous storybooks, Gorey also nurtured a lifelong passion for the performing arts. This volume is the first to showcase his extensive theatrical work, including his transition from designing major productions to crafting original community theater pieces on Cape Cod.

Written by his friend and collaborator Carol Verburg, this deluxe hardcover edition is filled with annotated scripts, behind-the-scenes anecdotes, and over 200 images, including archival photos and previously unpublished artwork.

Edward Gorey, known for his unsettling pen-and-ink drawings with a Victorian flair, wrote and illustrated such books as The Gashlycrumb Tinies, The Evil Garden, and The Haunted Tea-Cosy, and animated sequences of his work have introduced the PBS series Mystery! since 1980. He was also a devoted dramatist. His work on the 1977 Broadway revival of Dracula won him a Tony Award for Best Costume Design and a nomination for Best Scenic Design, and he spent the last thirteen years of his life writing and staging community theater in Cape Cod.

Carol Verburg is an editor and writer, and the author of the Edgar Rowdey Cape Cod mystery novels. She lives in San Francisco.

NASA (the National Aeronautics and Space Administration), established in 1958, is the United States agency of scientific research, technological development, and exploration in space. Its vision since its inception has been "to reach for new heights and reveal the unknown so that what we do and learn will benefit all humankind." Responsible not only for landing the first men on the moon in 1969, NASA's technological research has led to the development of the first weather and communications satellites, over 130 flights within 30 years of space shuttle missions, the landing of rovers on the Mars surface, as well as the establishment with 16 other nations of an International Space Station in 2000. Since the retirement of the space shuttle missions in 2011, NASA has continued its scientific research with several aims, most notably to land humans on Mars and to launch the Next Generation Air Transportation System by 2025, a program to design aircraft that are more fuel efficient and environmentally responsible.

A FEW RULES FOR PREDICTING THE FUTURE

An Essay

BY OCTAVIA E. BUTLER, ILLUSTRATED BY MANZEL BOWMAN

The wise words of science fiction icon Octavia E. Butler live on in this beautiful and giftable little volume.

“There’s no single answer that will solve all our future problems. There’s no magic bullet. Instead there are thousands of answers—at least. You can be one of them if you choose to be.”

Originally published in Essence magazine in the year 2000, Octavia E. Butler’s essay “A Few Rules for Predicting the Future” offers an honest look into the inspiration behind her science fiction novels and the importance of studying history and taking responsibility for our actions if we are to move forward.

Organized into four main rules, this short essay reminds readers to learn from the past, respect the law of consequences, be aware of their perspectives, and count on the surprises. Citing the warning signs of fascism, the illusive effects of fear and wishful thinking, and the unpredictable nature of what is yet to come, Butler shares realistic but hopeful suggestions to shape our future into something good. An inspiring and motivational gift for students and recent graduates, fans of Butler’s work, and anyone seeking a brighter day tomorrow, this exquisite gift book includes stunning Afrofuturist artwork by Manzel Bowman alongside the full text of the original essay.

Octavia E. Butler (1947–2006) was a renowned African American author of several award-winning novels, including Parable of the Sower, which was a New York Times Notable Book of the Year in 1993, and Parable of the Talents, winner of the Nebula Award for the best science fiction novel in 1995. She received a MacArthur Genius Grant and PEN West Lifetime Achievement Award for her body of work and was acclaimed for her lean prose, strong protagonists, and social observations in stories that range from the distant past to the far future.

WOODCUT

(Updated Edition)

BY BRYAN NASH GILL,
 INTRODUCTION BY BILL MCKIBBEN

An awe-inspiring collection of Bryan Nash Gill's large-scale relief prints from cross sections of previously felled trees.

If there is, indeed, nothing lovelier than a tree, Connecticut-based artist Bryan Nash Gill (1961–2013) showed us why. Creating prints from cross sections of trees, Gill revealed the sublime power locked inside their arboreal rings, patterns not only of great beauty but also a year-by-year record of the life and times of the fallen or damaged logs. The artist rescued the wood from the property surrounding his studio and neighboring land, extracted and prepared blocks of various species—including ash, maple, oak, spruce, and willow—and then printed them by carefully following and pressing the contours of the rings until the intricate designs transferred from tree to paper.

These exquisitely detailed prints are collected and published in this updated edition, which now includes a new introduction by Bill McKibben. Also featured are Gill's series of printed lumber and offcuts, such as burls, branches, knots, and scrubs, and an interview with the artist describing his labor-intensive printmaking process. Woodcut will appeal to anybody who appreciates the grandeur and mystery of trees, as well as those who work with wood and marvel at the rich history embedded in its growth.

An exquisite coffee table book in a soothing neutral color palette that invites hours of contemplation.

Holmes-Miller traces her development as a designer and leader, beginning with her own family and its rich multiethnic history. She narrates her experiences as a design student at Rhode Island School of Design, Maryland Institute College of Art, and Pratt, leading up to her oft-cited Pratt thesis examining barriers to success for Black designers.

Martin Luther King Jr.'s assassination on April 4, 1968, marks the closing of the 1954–1968 Civil Rights era. The Civil Rights Movement was a long-term, widespread, organized effort by African Americans and their allies to end the post-Civil War era of Jim Crow laws. Enforced for nearly one hundred years, Jim Crow legalized the marginalization of African Americans, and the Civil Rights Movement sought to eradicate legalized racial discrimination, disenfranchisement, and racial segregation in America. King's murder finally moves the needle to change. In the same window of time, President Lyndon B. Johnson signs the Civil Rights Act of 1968, and the advertising and graphic design industries start asking the question "Where are the Black designers?" Dorothy E. Hayes, graphic designer and educator, answers, "We are HERE! and succeeding in spite of the obstacles!" Dorothy has a dream.

The pre-Civil Rights era, the Civil Rights era, and the post-Civil Rights era are the seasons of my coming-of-age story and my journey of art and design. I lived through extremely important American sociopolitical events and pop-cultural shifts. My mother's kitchen was the setting for our family dinners, with Walter Cronkite appearing on our

MARGIN AND TEXT

Amplifying Diverse Voices in Architecture

BY EDITED BY BETSY WEST, KELLY CARLSON REDDIG AND JOSÉ L.S. GAMEZ

A broad range of diverse voices in architecture discuss issues of equity, access, and social justice embedded in and related to the built environment.

Margin and Text is a collection of essays, interviews, and personal stories, as well as historical and current writings and lectures, contributed by BIPOC and female practitioners and educators in architecture. Each piece offers reflections on architecture's troubled past, commentary on its fluid present, and visions of possible futures, all set amid today's context of broad social activism, divisive politics, and the devastating toll of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Edited by architecture educators Betsy West, Kelly Carlson-Reddig, and José L.S. Gámez, Margin and Text draws together contributors who are widely diverse in gender, ethnicity, age, religion, culture, point of view, and the nature of their work. Each chapter features an introduction by one of the editors, followed by essays from names in the field.

Betsy West is an Associate Professor in the David R. Ravin School of Architecture. She received her Master of Architecture degree from Yale University.

Kelly Carlson-Reddig is an Associate Professor in the David R. Ravin School of Architecture. She completed her Bachelor of Architecture at Texas Tech University in 1986 and her Master of Environmental Design at Yale University in 1992.

José L.S. Gámez is Dean of the College of Arts + Architecture at UNC Charlotte and longtime faculty member in the David R. Ravin School of Architecture.

BUILDING CULTURE

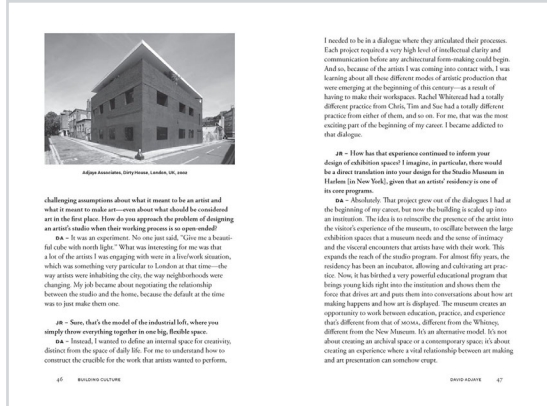

Sixteen Architects on How Museums Are Shaping the Future of Art, Architecture, and Public Space

BY JULIAN ROSE, FOREWORD BY YVE-ALAIN BOIS

An insider's look at art museums and how they shape the ways we view art, through the eyes of the architects who design them.

Architects and art lovers everywhere will enjoy this remarkable collection of interviews from sixteen of the world's most celebrated, thoughtful, and innovative architects who have designed many of the world's greatest museums. Spanning generations, geographies, and methods of architectural practice, these architects share the complex and fascinating process of creating spaces for art. Building Culture includes interviews with:

- Frank Gehry, who reveals how a half-century of dialogue with the visual arts influenced his revolutionary Guggenheim Bilbao.
- Kulapat Yantrasast, who describes his rethinking of exhibition design and how it expands the presentation of work in venerable institutions like the Metropolitan Museum of Art, where he is currently redesigning the galleries for the arts of Africa, Oceania, and the Americas.
- Walter Hood, whose long interest in improvisational techniques in music informed his design for outdoor performance spaces in the Oakland Museum.
- Elizabeth Diller, whose conception of the Shed in New York City's Hudson Yards was influenced by decades of work in conceptual and performance art.
- Esteemed architects who have designed, renovated, or created galleries for MoMA, the New Museum, and the American Museum of Natural History in New York; the National Gallery and the Tate Modern in London; the Pérez Art Museum Miami; the CentrePompidou in Paris, the 21st Century Museum of Contemporary Art, Kanazawa in Japan; the Museum of West African Art (currently under construction) in Nigeria; and many others.

Julian Rose regularly contributes articles to publications such as Aperture, Architectural Review, Artforum, Perspecta, and October. He was a Senior Editor at Artforum from 2012 to 2018 and is a cofounder of the design studio Formlessfinder, whose work was selected for inclusion in MoMA's 2011 Young Architects Program, won the 2012 AIA NY New Practices Award, and was recognized with the 2020 Architecture League Prize. His design work has been exhibited internationally at venues including the Chicago Architecture Biennial

This lively compendium reveals intensely varied architectural philosophies from a diverse group of established and up-and-coming professionals.

BEING BAD

Breaking the Rules and Becoming Everything You're Not Supposed to Be

BY ARIELLE EGOZI

What happens when you stop giving a f*ck about what your parents, partners, and society expect of you and ask yourself what you really want?

Salon's inaugural sex and love advice columnist and author of the viral LinkedIn sex work post, Arielle Egozi, shares their journey as a queer, neurodivergent, child of immigrants who never quite fit into the social roles she was supposed to, instead choosing to embrace their multiple dimensions, and eventually discovering freedom—and true power—by being “bad” in a world that kept trying to force her to be “good.”

What if sex positivity wasn't about having sex at all? What if you ditched relationship hierarchies and explored relationship anarchy? How can everyone get in touch with their inner domme? Using frameworks and philosophies cultivated from years of living, writing, speaking, and educating on sex, relationships, and identity through a queer and decolonizing lens, Egozi offers questions, practices, and tools to help you find your own power, and step into it—creating space for you to dream far beyond what your family, society, or capitalist culture expects. Being Bad offers you the permission to become who you are, however you choose to be.

Arielle Egozi (she/they) is a writer and creative director. Their work is centered on the destigmatization (and celebration) of all bodies, brains, and identities and has been featured globally across major publications like the Washington Post, Business Insider, and Vice. She shares a bed with her two perrhijos and partner.

LOST & FOUND

Nine life-changing lessons about stuff from someone who lost everything

BY HELEN CHANDLER-WILDE

Why do we buy and keep the things we do, and how can we live a less cluttered life? Journalist Helen Chandler-Wilde dives deep to explore, explain, and guide us on the path to liberation from the tyranny of “too much.”

On New Year's Eve of 2018, Helen Chandler-Wilde lost everything she owned in a storage unit fire in Croydon, England, where she'd stowed all her possessions after a big breakup. She was left devastated and forced to re-evaluate her relationship with owning material things.

In Lost & Found, she offers a profound mix of memoir, self-help, and journalism to explore the psychological reasons, sociological quirks of human nature, and fascinating science behind why we buy and hold onto things. Helen interviews people from all walks of life, including behavioral psychologists on the science of nostalgia, a nun on what it's like to own almost nothing, and consumer psychologists on why we spend impulsively, to help us better understand why we're surrounded by clutter and what we can do to change it.

By the end of this smart-thinking book filled with lessons and engaging prompts to help us gain perspective on our buying habits and the value we place on what we already have, your relationship with your belongings will be changed forever. The perfect “new year, new you” read or gift for anyone who is downsizing, striving for a more sustainable lifestyle, or is eager to cultivate a minimalist mindset.

Helen Chandler-Wilde is a news and features journalist at Bloomberg. Previously, she worked at The Telegraph writing long-reads, analyses, and coverage of the human tales behind the headlines. She studied social sciences and Italian at UCL and holds an MA in journalism from City University. Helen lives in south London, and in her free time, she likes to read, cook, and rummage through charity shops.

Showing Off Our Status with Stuff

According to traditional economic theory, humans make only rational decisions when they are shopping. If someone sees a shirt she likes, she should be much happier to pay twenty dollars for it than two hundred.

But sometimes we do the exact opposite. When something has a high price, we want to buy it even more. These items are called Veblen goods, after Thorstein Veblen, a nineteenth-century American economist who wrote about how we use our stuff to gain social status. In his 1899 book, The Theory of the Leisure Class, Veblen examines the shopping habits of the American upper class, including their taste for showy and expensive stuff bought to demonstrate their wealth.

[Flowers] that can be cultivated with relative ease are accepted and admired by the lower middle class... [but] are rejected as vulgar by those people who are better able to pay for expensive flowers... while still other flowers, of no greater intrinsic beauty than these, are cultivated at great cost and call out much admiration...¹

In other words, Veblen says that sometimes we buy expensive stuff simply because it's expensive—we associate rich people with high status, so we buy expensive things in the hope they will lend us social status. A lot has changed since then, but Veblen's original example holds true: Fashionable florists work with expensive peonies and orchids, and ignore cheaper carnations.

There are plenty of other examples of this effect. Imagine two trench coats: one from a luxury brand, and the second identical to it in every way except for the label. Would you pay the same price for each? Of course not; no one would. When you buy the luxury coat, you are not only paying for a functional item that keeps you warm and dry, you are also paying for the social status that it brings.

Professor Jill Sandie of Washington and Lee University in Virginia is something of a modern successor to Veblen. She has put forward a set of principles that determine what becomes a status symbol and what doesn't. According to her research, it boils down to three things: wastefulness, rarity, and observability. Beyond those three criteria, Sandie says that what becomes a status symbol is pretty arbitrary.

Wastefulness

The first element, wastefulness, refers to the excessive use of money, effort, time, or other resources used to obtain an item. It's a subtle marker of your economic status: Showing that you don't have to cut corners in your choice of coat demonstrates that you have money to spare.

Wastefulness looks very different in different cultures. When we talk, Sandie tells me about the Abelam people of Papua New Guinea, an agrarian society that lives in the rainforest. “They compete for social status by growing yams. If you can grow the biggest yam that's so big and tough it's not even edible any more, then that's the route to status in that society,” she says. I

A warm, witty, and affirming self-help guide to learning how to get to know and love yourself, becoming your own soulmate, and living a fulfilling life whether you partner or not, from the creator of NPR's Life Kit.

Meghan Keane spent most of her adult life without being in a serious, long-term relationship, and for much of that time, being single wasn't something she celebrated or particularly enjoyed. Sick of feeling anxious or sad when she received yet another wedding invitation without a plus one, she decided she was going to mindfully shift her perspective. Luckily, Meghan is the founder of NPR's self-improvement brand, Life Kit, so she consulted the experts, and what she learned changed her mindset—and her life.

Party of One is the self-help book Meghan wished she'd had from the start—a deeply researched, encouraging guide to bridging the gap between knowing that being single is awesome and feeling and embodying it. Inside, you'll find practical advice for strengthening your self-compassion and inner resilience, practices for stopping rumination cycles, scripts for dealing with nosy friends and relatives, thoughtful prompts to support you on your journey, and much more.

Meghan Keane is the founder and managing producer for NPR's Life Kit, a podcast and radio show that brings listeners advice and actionable information about personal finances, health, parenting, relationships, and more. Palace Costume

Mimi Haddon

INSIDE HOLLYWOOD'S BEST KEPT FASHION SECRET

ARIANNE PHILLIPS

Arianne Phillips is a three-time Academy Award-winning costume designer. Her work on Walk the Line (2005), WE (2014), and Once Upon a Time in Hollywood (2019) has earned a total of 10 nominations for Best Costume Design. She also received a BAFTA nomination for Bohemian Rhapsody (2018) and a Grammy nomination for Bohemian Rhapsody (2018). She has worked with Madonna for the past two decades, creating iconic looks, including the costumes for her world tour. Her hair is elaborated on Madison (2019) with Prose and Poise.

Hi! What is so unique about Palace Costume?

AD: There are all kinds of costume houses, and some have closed, and some have opened. So, what Palace does is unique. Melody is unique. Palace is a reflection of Melody's aesthetic. Melody has very elevated eye and a discerning eye, so if you think of Palace as a time capsule, here's the catch: I think that it would represent, aesthetically, the best versions of most eras/ages. It is the cultural anthropology because it's such a cross section.

I think what is unique about Palace is specifically Melody and I can't even say Melody's passion for collecting. I mean, you can see it because there are living quarters mixed in with the regular rooms, there's an apartment upstairs, and there's a kind of no-clear dividing line between Melody's aesthetic, her work, and her private life. There's that passion, that dedication. What you're getting to is unique. You're getting Melody's creation and what she finds to be valuable. I appreciate her aesthetic and her discerning eye and just her. What about clothes to keep and to have in the costume house is her creation. It's her great of eye.

Hi! Can you recall the first time you visited Palace Costume?

AD: So, I think I first came to Palace in the late '80s, at the beginning of my career, when I was living in New York. Most costume houses are physically overwhelming. They're big warehouses out in the suburbs, or at the studios. The thing that I liked about Palace then, and I still like today, is the way that it's the way that it's this kind of ramble of buildings and garages and products. As they expanded along the way, it does feel like a delicious treasure trove, and you can kind of explore it there but it's if you're looking for something.

It's a massive experience, as opposed to a lot of these costume houses, which are like warehouses. They're great too, but I can't say my headshots are an odd fit. Palace and really kind of the experience is it is a different way I just enjoy the physical experience of being there. And just from the

One word—WOW!

I was privileged enough to be shown around the mind-blowing Palace Costume space by its owner and founder, Melody Barnett. It is impossible to put into words the scale of Melody's clothing collection, which is one of the most important reference points and resources for Hollywood's leading costume designers. Palace Costume has to be the most enchanting place in the world to go if you're looking for vintage clothes, jewelry, costumes, or inspiration of any kind. It holds an amazing assortment of treasures and is so immaculately organized and maintained.

It's simply the best.

PALACE COSTUME

Inside Hollywood's Best Kept Fashion Secret

BY MIMI HADDON

Palace Costume is a behind-the-scenes glimpse into Palace Costume & Prop Co., an exclusive Los Angeles film-industry haven of dresses, gowns, garments, accessories, props, and jewelry featured in countless movies for more than fifty years.

Envisioned and curated by owner Melody Barnett, Palace Costume is a 30,000-square-foot treasure trove of over half a million pieces and a beloved and legendary collection exclusively for costumers, stylists, and designers. Barnett's journey in retro clothing is movie-worthy itself. Her first boutique in Los Angeles in the early 1970s attracted the likes of Diana Ross and Joni Mitchell and many other legends from the era. This inspired her to transition the business into a to-the-trade-only rental service enabling her to hold onto and care for these vintage gems. Since then, hundreds of classic films have featured clothing from Palace over the years, including Bonnie and Clyde, Chinatown, and The Godfather, to name just a few.

Mimi Haddon is a Los Angeles-based photographer, costume designer, and educator. Her clients include Rodarte, Tierra Whack, The Elder Statesman, L.A. Dance Project, M83, and The New Yorker. She has been documenting the Palace Costume collection for twenty years.

LAST DAYS OF SUMMER

California Skateboarding Archive 1975–1978

BY HUGH HOLLAND

Explore the captivating world of 1970s California skateboarding through Hugh Holland's lens in Last Days of Summer. This complete archive, enriched with many never-before-seen images, an introduction by acclaimed artist Shepard Fairey, and extensive interviews, unveils the evolution of a legendary subculture and the photographer who documented it all.

From 1975 to 1978, Hugh Holland immortalized the burgeoning subculture of skateboarding in California, photographing young sidewalk surfers on the streets of Los Angeles, parts of the San Fernando Valley, Venice Beach, and as far away as San Francisco and Baja California. In four short years, he documented the rise of the sport before it became officially sanctioned and permanently changed by commercialization, brand sponsorships, and safety precautions like helmets and knee pads. In hindsight, this time period held a wild and free innocence that Holland captured beautifully.

His images, from suburban backyard haunts to the asphalt streets that connected them, still resonate as an important document of this time and place where legendary Dogtown and Z-Boys skateboarders were just beginning. With their requisite bleach-blond hair, tanned bodies, tube socks, and Vans sneakers, these young outsiders are masterfully captured against a sometimes harsh but always sunny Southern California landscape.

Hugh Holland is a Los Angeles–based photographer who rose to fame with now-classic 1970s images of skateboarders and their burgeoning subculture.

Shepard Fairey is an internationally acclaimed artist who emerged from the skateboarding scene in the late 1980s.

M6

I think this is one of the cameras that many photographers aspire to own. I did too, and I had one for many years—until I sold it and I got the change to get my MP6 (but that is another story).

Thanks to my job I have been through a lot of cameras in my time, and I have owned a few different Leica bodies. I also know the enviable position of being able to try out more cameras than you can shake a stick at, including the venerable Leica M6.

Why is the M6 so popular though? Because it really represents a high point for Leica. The M6 is a really special camera that has enough heft to support a wide range of photographic styles but being more compact. It is a simple, mechanical rangefinder camera with a light meter. What more could you ask for from a film rangefinder?

The Leica M6 is probably my most requested of all the Leica family. And that is mostly because it has the right meter, but also because it looks pretty hot too, and you can get all of that lovely Leica glass on it. It really is the Leica for the people level, people with money anyway.

The M6 isn't cheap, but for many who are willing to spend the money, it is a gateway camera—once you have one you will want to try them all.

The M6 has been so popular during the last decade that Leica actually took the unusual step of re-releasing the camera in 2022. So, you can actually get your and buy one brand new now, which is a real bonus.

Be prepared: once you buy a Leica, you might not be able to stop.

MAMIYA

Just like Pentax and Fujifilm, Mamiya had its eyes set on the 645 format as well. And to say that they went all in would be an understatement. The Mamiya 645 spanned three generations of cameras, from 1973 up until now—although the cameras that make now bear little resemblance to the original cameras, and they are digital. But that is quite the lineage.

Early cameras were mechanical and come with an abominably massive range of accessories and lenses. Over time, improvements were made, and the final generation of cameras had autofocus and all the modern accoutrements that you would expect from a professional video camera.

Any one of these cameras is going to be a great shooting experience, but my personal preference is the second gen Pro TL. With its auto meter and TTL metering, it is a very enjoyable camera to use. And the lenses, especially the legendary 80 mm 1:1.9. That lens is a veritable piece of art.

They made so many versions of these cameras that we cannot dive into them all, but suffice to say, you will not have any trouble finding a nice one. Lenses tend to be inexpensive and accessories are plentiful. Getting into the Mamiya 645 system is easy; it's getting out that is the hard part.

So, if you cannot decide between the Pentax 645 or the Mamiya 645, it might come down to styling or cost, or they are similar in price and performance. But either way, you won't be disappointed.

NIKON

The Granddaddy

Some cameras gain legendary status, and the Nikon F is quite possibly one of the most legendary cameras of all time. This camera was a solid home run for Nikon back when it was released in 1959.

This is the camera that set the trend for SLR cameras. If you are even slightly serious about film cameras, then you should at least try shooting with a Nikon F.

That is the camera that started it all. The first true professional SLR on the market. Although there had been other SLR cameras, none had the combination of size, speed, and perfect balance. These really were nothing that came close to it at the time, and it very quickly became the choice of professional worldwide. Up until this point, the Germans had completely dominated the world photo market. Now it was Japan's turn to take the top spot.

The influence of this camera cannot be underestimated. It changed the way we use and buy cameras. To hold one is to hold a pivotal part of photographic history in your hands. And not only that, it looks absolutely stunning.

The list of what this did to change the way photographers use their cameras is enormous, but most notable is that the first SLR with a full 135 format standard. The Nikon motor drive, the largest range of lenses, the first full professional system... I could go on for a long time. This camera completely destroyed the competition. Not only that, this camera had the build quality that was usually associated with German cameras, so for this the Japanese had a reputation for cheap cameras.

Not only is this camera beautiful and very, very capable. It is also built like a tank and would happily stand up to the worst punishment it was ever given. This camera was the choice for war photographers. It could even stop a bullet, as seen on Doc Cullin's camera.

I am not saying you need a camera to stop a bullet. But if you want a solid, dependable camera, with a huge range of lenses, that doesn't cost the earth, then the Nikon F should be on your wishlist.

WHEN YOU FIND THE RIGHT ROCK

BY MARY LYN RAY, ILLUSTRATED BY FELICITA SALA

A marvelous exploration of the special relationship children find with the natural world and the fascination and friendship they find in special rocks, from poet Mary Lyn Ray and artist Felicity Sala.

Somewhere, a rock is waiting for you. One just the right color for your windowsill, or just the right shape for drawing a face.

Maybe it is a rock from the heart of a mountain that will remind you of how big YOU are inside, too. Maybe it is a rock washed by the sea that knows all about the backs and forths and ups and downs of things. Maybe it is a small rock, just the right size to close your hand around and know that the rock is with you and it is just right.

Through vibrant illustration and evocative text, When You Find the Right Rock carries readers along on a journey of discovery, from the mountains to the sea, that's all about learning the beauty of being in the moment, connecting with nature, and the thrill of finding a precious keepsake to call your own.

Mary Lyn Ray has written many acclaimed books for children, including Stars, Pumpkins, Mud, The Thank You Book, and Go to Sleep, Little Farm. She lives in South Danbury, New Hampshire, on an old farm where there are big rocks and pocket rocks, medium-sized and big, big rocks—all just right for saying hello to.

Felicita Sala is a self-taught illustrator. She studied philosophy and languages in Australia but then decided she wanted to create pictures. Since moving to Italy, she has worked on a few stop-motion animation projects along with her husband, Gianluca, but her passion lies in making picture books. She gets inspired by nature, children, mid-century illustration, folk art, and architecture. She lives in Rome with Gianluca and their daughter, Nina.

BY KATHERINE PATERSON, ILLUSTRATED BY SALLY DENG

The inspiring true story of how one visionary woman used children's books to help heal a generation of Germany's children after WWII and went on to set up the International Youth Library and IBBY, International Board on Books for Young People.

Jella Lepman was a woman who stood her ground, challenged convention, and worked fiercely to transform her biggest dreams into reality.

In 1945, when Jella was tasked with what seemed like an insurmountable challenge—to create a haven of imagination and joy for the children of a Germany scarred by war, she turned to a steadfast companion: books. As a Jewish woman who had fled from the Nazis, Jella was determined to restore a sense of childhood to the young people who had only known conflict and violence. Despite constant obstacles, Jella persevered. With the help of publishers and children from around the world, Jella collected an extraordinary collection of 4,000 children's books in pursuit of her mission to promote peace. The roving literary collection would eventually find a home as the International Youth Library in Munich, now with over 600,000 items, the largest collection of children's books and materials in the world.

Katherine Paterson is the award-winning author of more than forty books, including eighteen novels for children and young people. She is a two-time winner of the Newbery and National Book Awards and National Ambassador for Young People's Literature emeritus. For her body of work, she was accorded the Astrid Lindgren Memorial and Hans Christian Andersen Awards, and named an honorary lifetime member of the International Board of Books for Young People.

Sally Deng creates art for magazines, newspapers, and books and is the author-illustrator of two children's picture books. Her art has been recognized by multiple illustration annuals and exhibited in galleries across the U.S.

MAKE A PRETTY SOUND

A Story of Ella Jenkins—The First Lady of Children's Music

BY TRACI N. TODD, ILLUSTRATED BY ELEANOR DAVIS

Once upon a time, children's music was just Mother Goose, nursery songs, and lullabies. And then came Ella Jenkins.

Ella Jenkins is an American folk singer and living legend dubbed "The First Lady of Children's Music." For nearly 70 years, she has been writing and performing music that has entertained and engaged generations of young listeners. In Make a Pretty Song, Ella's life and legacy are captured in vibrant sights, sounds, and stories that leap right off the page.

Born in St. Louis, Missouri, and raised in Chicago, Ella grew up loving music of all kinds—the call-and-response of Cab Calloway, the exciting rhythms of Moroccan and Indian records spun in a local record shop, the bluesy notes her uncle teased from his harmonica. She listened to music from around the world, and no matter what language it was in, she could feel what it meant—the bridge in understanding and feeling that music offers from one heart to another.

When she began working with children, she knew just what to do. She knew music would offer children a kinetic learning experience that engaged them physically, verbally, and empathetically, creating community out of song. Soon, she was recording her own albums and became an international star.

Traci N. Todd is the award-winning author of several books for children, including Nina: A Story of Nina Simone, illustrated by Christian Robinson, and Holding Her Own: The Exceptional Life of Jackie Ormes, illustrated by Shannon Wright. She still remembers jumping on her childhood bed (don't tell Mom!) and listening to Ella Jenkins records on her little orange-and-white record player. A Chicago native, she now writes and edits in Queens, New York.

Eleanor Davis is an illustrator and cartoonist who has created award-winning work for both adults and children. She has a baby, to whom she loves to sing. She lives in Athens, Georgia.

GOLDEN GATE

Building the Mighty Bridge

BY ELIZABETH PARTRIDGE,
ILLUSTRATED BY ELLEN HECK

The Golden Gate Bridge, beloved landmark and symbol of San Francisco, finally gets a gorgeous picture book that tells the thrilling story of how it was built! Written by National Book Award finalist and Sibert Medal winner Elizabeth Partridge.

Across a treacherous strait where deep ocean waters rip back and forth with the tides, and during the depths of the Great Depression, daring teams of engineers and builders set out to make something many thought impossible.

Begun in 1933 and officially opened on May 27, 1937, the Golden Gate Bridge and its awe-inspiring and groundbreaking construction are truly a testament to the power of hope and perseverance. Told from the point of view of the lighthouse keeper's kids, who watch in fascination as the trucks and crews arrive and steel towers coated in heavy red paint begin to rise above the tempestuous water, Golden Gate shares a thrilling visual perspective on each stage of the breathtaking project.

Young readers can look and learn as each turn of the page reveals dazzling, color-soaked artwork paired with text that blends factual details into the narrators' keen observations. By the final spread, where fireworks explode in celebration over the mighty bridge, the tale is complete—not only of an astonishing feat of engineering but of the potential of human ingenuity to defy the odds and make the impossible possible.

Elizabeth Partridge has lived near the Golden Gate Bridge all her life. Driving or walking across the strong steel bridge, suspended between sky and water, always thrills her. The author of many books, Elizabeth is a National Book Award finalist and has won the Los Angeles Times Book Prize for Young Adult Literature, ALA's Printz Honor Award, and the Boston Globe-Horn Book Award. She lives in Berkeley with her three-generation family, two dogs, and the world's shyest cat.

Ellen Heck is a printmaker who also makes picture books, including her debut, A is for Bee. She has lived in eight states but now calls North Carolina home.

Using his music to unite and empower the youth of today, from the ground up, he has built and nurtured a vast collective of dedicated fans around the globe—a close-knit family that's grown into the millions.

After his impactful debut with the EP hope for the underrated youth and the UK chart-topping album weird! in 2020, he solidified his position as a powerhouse in the industry. His self-titled third studio album in 2022, that hit number one in seven different countries, and subsequent world tour further cemented his status, with the release of the short film MARS adding depth to his creative portfolio and philanthropic efforts during Trans Awareness Week. Continuing his momentum into 2023, YUNGBLUD unveiled a series of compelling singles, including collaborations that showcased his evolution as an artist, leading up to the diverse sound of "When We Die (Can We Still Get High?)" featuring Lil Yachty in 2024.

AIM OF GAME

It's easy to learn and simple to play; just say it, rate it, and grab it! Take the lead and draw a card from over 470 love-'em or hate-'em topics, then say it aloud. Now instinctively and secretly rate how you feel about it—Sour, So-So, or Sweet—then put on your best poker face as the other players try to guess your rating. After all, how well do they know you, really? This is where things can get spicy. When everyone's ready, you all flip over your Rating cards at the same time. If any other players match your rating, then the race is on for them to grab your Topic card and win the point! Once that madness is over and the disbelieving chat about your rating subsides ("What?! But you've always said you love watching Die Hard at Christmas!"), then the player on your left takes the lead, so you're in the grabbing game now. The honesty and tension will continue until a player collects seven Topic cards and is crowned the winner!

WHO IT'S FOR

Perfect for people with strong opinions and friends who think they know everything about each other.

WHAT'S INSIDE

476 Topic cards, 24 Rating cards, and English instructions.

But beware: watchful drones lie in wait, and your competition will do everything possible to sabotage your journey. And if you find yourself splatted with Lucky Poop, then you're in for a treat!

This game is for gossips and people who will do what it takes to win.
