Introduction

Just like our guidebooks and gift books inform and inspire travel lovers around the globe, our aim with our kids' list is to get the next generation of explorers excited about the amazing world around them. This year, we're zooming in on travel, exploration, and animals, starting off with an everyday nature journal and the fascinating and fun Snacks Around the World. In May, we're premiering four of our very first guidebooks for kids! Engaging and informative, our kids' guides to London, Paris, New York, and Rome are perfect for armchair adventures, holiday anticipation, and on-the-go fact-sharing. Later in the year, check out new and familiar sites from a different perspective with The World from Above, inspect creepy-crawlies from around the globe in The Bug Atlas, and for 5-minute stories about nature after dark, Goodnight, Earth. Whether at home, on the road or in school, we hope to inspire our youngest global citizens to make every day an adventure. Come explore!

Take a Look Inside

How Things Work

About James Gulliver Hancock

James is a seriously well-traveled illustrator who is well known for his playful and whimsical illustration style. His beautifully detailed artwork throughout the How Things Work series bursts with energy and pops with character.

An interactive children's exhibition that brings Lonely Planet Kids' How Cities Work book to life has been touring throughout Australia since 2018.

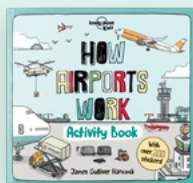

Some of his other notable projects include illustrating The Lost Things Club Book (Little Brown); A World of Environments (Australian Geographic); All the Buildings in Paris, All the Buildings in New York, All the Buildings in London (Universe); and more.
