The True Ugly Duckling

How Hans Christian Andersen Became a Swan

Sandra Nickel
Illustrated by Calvin Nicholls

Structured like a fairy tale, this is the story of how Hans Christian Andersen took all the parts of his life—whether painful or transcendent—and used them to create books that have touched children the world over. Illustrated with impeccable paper-cut sculptures.

Rainbow Cookies

Lesléa Newman

Illustrated by Z. B. Asterplume

Cookie and her moms taste Ms. Madeline's best cookie yet: a heart-shaped, rainbow-striped confection baked for Pride. But Rainbow Cookies make some neighbors angry, and Ms. Madeleine is afraid her Rainbow Cookie might be her last. Cookie gathers friends and neighbors to support Ms. Madeleine, showing the whole town just how colorful, fun, celebratory, and delicious love, Pride, and cookies can be!

If I Lived in the Sky

Abigail Rajunov

Guy hates it here on the ground. It's dirty and smelly and loud—and don't get him started on the other forest creatures. Oh how much better life would be if he lived in the sky! The places he'd go, the wind in his face and the trees far below! But of course, Guy cannot live in the sky. From debut author and illustrator Abigail Rajunov comes an unusually wise and gorgeously illustrated story about gaining new perspective.

The Not So Quiet Life of Marcel Marceau

Jenn Bailey and Sherry Bushue

Illustrated by Caldecott Honoree Pamela Zagarenski

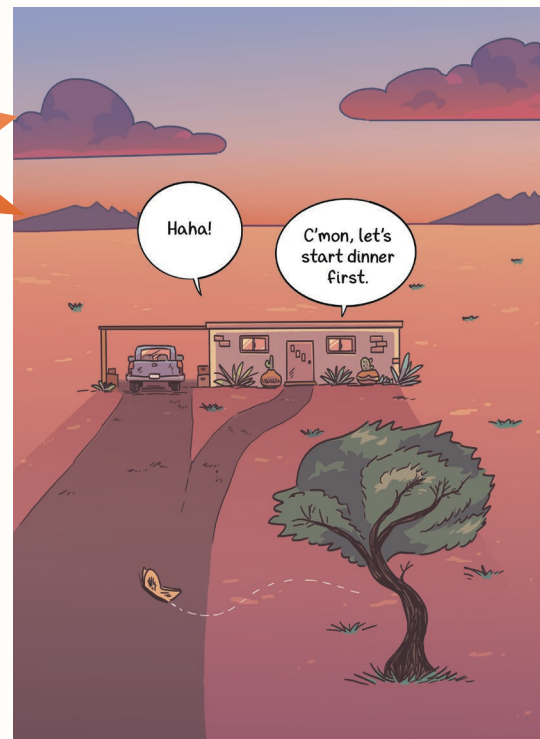

Marcel was born in 1923 in the French city of Strasbourg. But his safe, creative childhood was shattered by the advent of World War II and anti-Jewish laws. His family was forced to flee. To help others escape, Marcel used his artistic talents to forge passports and disguised himself as a Scout leader to lead children over the border to safety. Surviving the war, he became renowned around the world as Marcel Marceau, the most famous mime of the twentieth century.

The Froggy Library

Julie Fivash

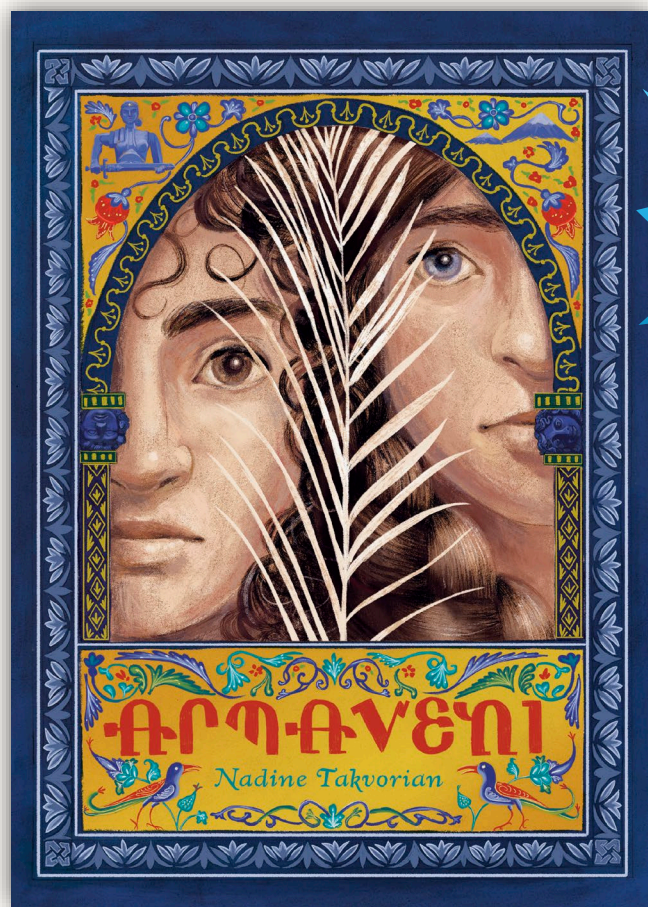

Anura is a young frog spending the summer back home with their grandmother. With some...er...gentle prodding, they get a job working at the local library and are tasked with a big project: create an archive that captures what makes Soggy Stump so special. And so begins a summer full of fry bread, weaving, zines, community gardens, manga, and (maybe) an answer to the question of: how do we preserve the knowledge, wisdom, and memories of the ones we love?

A Graphic Novel of the Armenian Genocide Nadine Takvorian

Nadine would give anything to learn about her family's history in Armenia and Turkey—where they came from and how they came to America—but it is just too painful for her parents. All Nadine knows is that her family was caught up in the Armenian genocide. Until one day the dam bursts. And through that flood of stories and memories, and a trip back to their people's homelands, Nadine discovers a key to unlocking her own heritage and the courage to speak up when injustice rears its head again.

Cuentista Book III

Donna Barba Higuera

Master storyteller Donna Barba Higuera brings her beloved Cuentista trilogy to a close in a book full of old friends and new, jaw-dropping twists, and a journey to the stars and back.

Itzel has never known a life on Earth. Growing up on Sagan, the granddaughter of the Cuentista, her years have been spent among the dactyls, griblets, and billow seeds of their new planet. But when a mysterious message arrives from across the cosmos, Itzel realizes that the home they thought destroyed hundreds of years ago has survived...and with it, another community of humans. Will she and the other Saganites brave the journey back to Earth? And what will they find? For they are not the only ones who have received this message...

Death in the Tallgrass

Andrea L. Rogers

The author of the Walter Award-winning Man Made Monsters and the Caldecott Medal-winning Chooch Helped delivers a murder mystery interwoven with Cherokee history and culture.

Diane and her family have moved onto their grandfather's ranch in the hills of Oklahoma. There's any number of problems she can see with her new situation, but the main one is plain: Grandfather Wilson is not a good man. But with her sisters and her parents—and the opportunity to reconnect with her Cherokee heritage—it's at least manageable.

Until a strange girl shows up on the ranch and Diane's life is changed forever. For she soon realizes that death lurks within the beautiful prairie grass around them... and a terrible secret that will tear their family apart if she lets it.

Asad's Secret

Najlaa Attaallah

Translated by Sawad Hussain

A window into a world most people see depicted only in seconds-long news reports, one that we all should look through in order to recognize the genuine humanity within.

Asad lives in Gaza, in a tiny house, on a narrow street pocked by half-destroyed buildings, in a camp that looks shabby to him and feels claustrophobic. He walks virtually the same route every day to his summer job at a printing press, passing the prison that holds his father, for reasons that have not been fully explained to him. As the oldest son, he feels the weight of responsibility for his seven brothers, his sisters, and his Ummi, who wants him to study hard and excel in school, as all mothers do.

Moody and reserved Asad has few friends, and fewer distractions. There seems to be no escaping. But Asad has a secret, too, a mysterious black bag that holds something important that he keeps hidden from everyone.

This rare novel by and about Palestinians—living, breathing people—showcases this boy whose life is never easy, even as it's filled with the longing, the bruised hopes, and the frustrations of any seventeen-year-old. Translated by Sawad Hussain, who was a Princeton translator in residence and has won numerous awards for her work.

Hear Ye Mortals

Yamile Saied Méndez

From the award-winning author of Furia—two brothers struggle against a totalitarian regime in this historical YA about fighting for what you believe in, even when the world around you tries to silence your voice.

Daniel and Adrián Aguirre are brothers and best friends. But in 1976 Rosario, Argentina, along with teachers and librarians, poets and musicians are among the authoritarian military government's main enemies, even if they're only teenagers playing music at home. When one of their songs becomes popular on the radio, the brothers and Río Babel, the rest of their band—all children of new immigrants from Spain, Palestine, and Germany—must choose between pursuing their dream of making music that speaks to the soul of their people or stay silent for the sake of their families.

They're ready to fight the military government, but when they're betrayed by one of their own, how can music really be worth all the pain?

The Lost Recipes of Stella Fortuna

A Novel

Leah Eskin

This adult literary novel combines the historical sweep and emotional power of The Invisible Bridge by Julie Orringer and the resonant use of food and recipes of Like Water for Chocolate by Laura Esquivel.

The year is 1943. Mussolini has enacted anti-Jewish laws across Italy, and the family of Stella Fortuna struggles to maintain any sense of their former life in Pitigliano, Italy. Then one night a neighbor comes to their door holding a ricotta pudding and tells them “You must leave now. You’re in grave danger.” The Nazi’s have arrived.

Grabbing what few things they can carry (and the pudding), Stella Fortuna escapes into the woods with her two older brothers and younger sister, Marcella. What follows is a desperate months-long flight. Stella dreams of romance, the comforts of home, and the food that was not just her mother’s love: it was the delicious expression of an entire culture in danger.

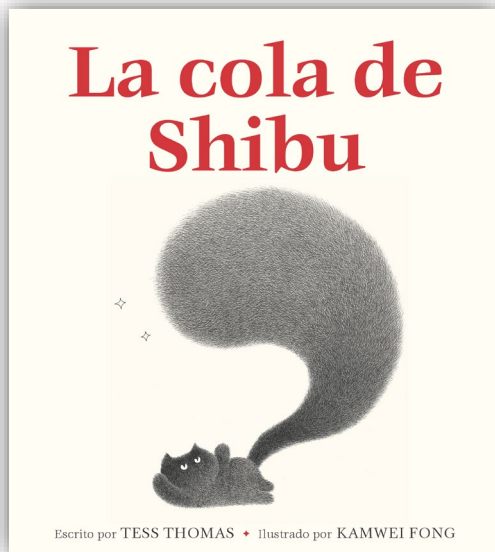

In a separate timeline, Edda Servi Machlin is a housewife in 1960s Westchester trying to make sense of a new culture, and the “spaghetti and meatballs” food that passes for Italian cuisine. With caustic wit, we see twentieth-century America through an immigrant’s eyes.

In between these two remarkable stories are more than forty recipes (updated for today’s cooks), all inspired by the life and example of Edda Servi Machlin, author of The Classic Cuisine of the Italian Jews.
