Opening children's hearts, minds, and worlds

In a joyful celebration of family and community, our Spring 2024 collection is overflowing with sweet stories that highlight the importance of connecting with others.

Whether it's a young Catholic girl in Nigeria traveling to see her extended Muslim family for Eid al-Adha (I'll See You in Ijebu, p. 2), a father and daughter bravely working together to protect their home from a tropical storm (Our Nipa Hut, p. 4), or the 4 new additions in our popular, growing Our World series (p. 14), these global stories show us how the values of meaningful connection and family link us together from all corners of the world.

From STEM to social-emotional learning, there are elements of our overarching themes of family and community connection in all of our new titles. You'll be cheering Marley on as they overcome their fear of crowds to attend a Pride parade, and in turn discover community within identity (Marley's Pride, p. 8). Your heart will race as a young starling narrowly escapes a hawk and learns there is more strength in a flock than in being alone (How Starling Got His Speckles, p. 6).

We hope you find your own meaningful connections within these books, and thank you for being part of our community.

Happy browsing,

Nancy
